What do you do at Integration Technology?

As Financial Controller, I am responsible for the day-to-day banking and finance functions of the company and ensuring all transactions are accurately recorded. From this information I provide reports to the executive team that not only show the current performance of the company, but also looking at future planning, making sure that strategic decisions are made based on the most accurate data.

What are your credentials/past experience, for working in your position?

I have worked in a variety of finance roles over the last 20+ years and became a qualified accountant (CGMA) in 2012. Over this time, I have worked in retail, the public sector and manufacturing as well as for varying sized companies. Not only has this given me a broad financial knowledge, but it has also exposed me to working in different corporate cultures.

What do you like about working at Integration Technology?

I came to work for Integration Technology because it is an innovative, technology driven company. Whether it is working with customers, looking at market trends or exploring new markets, the company is constantly looking to the future. The company also values its employees' input and is happy to let people utilise skills that aren't necessarily their core competence to help bring a different perspective.

What do you enjoy doing when you are not working?

Outside of work I like to stay active and took up running around 7yrs ago. I started out with road running but prefer to get out into the countryside running on trails. I like to have events to train for and have run multiple half marathons, a few marathons and my longest run so far was a 50k ultra.

To help with the running I also go to the gym to work on my strength and as another challenge, I have entered a couple of National Fitness Games competitions.
